

About

By capitalising on own skills and contributing to job creation, entrepreneurship training can help to empower migrants and refugees, in particular women who suffer lower integration rates than male migrants and face additional discrimination and challenges in their access to education and the labour market.

Insufficient connection to local business culture, limited access to business networks, and little understanding of support schemes for enterprise development is a barrier in stimulating entrepreneurship among migrant women.

The aim of the ARISE project is to promote the social and entrepreneurial capacities of migrant women through the development and exploitation of food-related knowledge and skills that provide possibilities for income-generating activities.

The project will foster the development and implementation of economically sustainable food-related innovative business ideas in order to promote mutual learning between the culture of migrant women and the one of the welcoming communities.
